" Postmodernism is dead " declares Nicolas Bourriaud in the opening line of his manifesto for our new global cultural era – the ' altermodern ' . As a preface to the latest Tate Triennial exhibition of the same name, the French curator and theorist sets about defining what he sees as the parameters of our contemporary society and offering paradigms for artistic approaches to navigating ...

Altermodernism: The Age of Stupid | Ellie Harrison

Few books can boast of introducing an entirely new word to the English language, but with the title of the Tate's fourth Triennial exhibition, leading critical theorist and curator Nicolas Bourriaud does just that. Made in today's global context, "Altermodern" art is a reaction against cultural standardization and commercialization. Characterized by artists' cross-border,

Altermodern: Tate Triennial by Nicolas Bourriaud

Altermodern is the new term the French curator Nicolas Bourriaud proposed for understanding our present. The recent Tate Triennial (London, February-April, 2009) was devoted to consecrating, or at least putting this concept into circulation. In the introduction to the catalogue Nicolas Bourriaud wrote:

Altermodern art is thus read as a hypertext; artists translate and transcode information from one format to another, and wander in geography as well as in history. This gives rise to practices which might be referred to as ' time-specific ' , in response to the ' site-specific ' work of the 1960s. Flight-lines, translation programmes and chains of heterogeneous elements articulate each ...
